NOTES TO EDITORS

ARK Schools was set up in 2004 to create a group of outstanding schools that radically improve pupils' life chances and runs a network of eleven academies in London, Birmingham and Portsmouth.

ARK Schools' aim is to help close the achievement gap between children from disadvantaged and more affluent backgrounds. ARK's academies focus on raising attainment so that every pupil has a real choice of going on to higher education when they complete school.

ARK academies are non-selective and community-oriented and are generally situated in areas of high social deprivation. Just under half of ARK Schools' pupils are on free school meals, compared with around 15% nationally.
